"Joshua gave an amazing and hilarious presentation during his appearance at Lincoln University.

It's always great to be able to work with professional and genuine people!

We look forward to laughing our socks off again in the near future!"

EMILY LEWIS

Meeting and Event Planner

"Joshua Routh is the best! He is so engaging and great at what he does! He always knows how to draw the crowd in and he really has the WOW factor.

I have guests and groups that I work with asking if Joshua will be back all the time.

He's also great to work with because he is flexible and accommodating."

JOSEPH ELDER

ICYPAA

"We had Joshua Routh come in for a large international conference with over 2500 attendees.

We had reviewed and met with many presenters and the difference was the professional attitude that Joshua had and his true desire to know our audiences.

His presentation was quite simply incredible!

Everyone in attendance were astounded and fully connected."

EMILY AMOS

"Joshua is amazing. He brings a high level of knowledge and fun to every workshop.

We have booked him for many years and his sessions are consistently standing room only!"

JOSHUA ROUTH OWNS A CIRCUS

ABOUT

As the founder of Circus Kaput, one of the largest variety artist agencies in the United States, he manages a team of more than 50 performers who deliver over 950 events each year.

Building and leading a creative team at that scale has given Joshua a unique perspective on what truly makes people connect, collaborate, and perform at their best.

In his keynote presentations, Joshua shares the practical tools and insights that have helped individuals and organizations strengthen connection, build trust, and create cultures people genuinely want to be part of.

The stories he shares are drawn directly from his life—training with Chinese acrobats, serving as a forest firefighter, and navigating the real-world challenges of building and leading a high-performing creative company.

Alongside these personal experiences, Joshua also brings the latest research from respected sources such as Gallup, Forbes, and leading human resources researchers, blending storytelling, data, and practical strategies audiences can apply immediately.

The result is a keynote experience that is both engaging and deeply practical, leaving audiences inspired and equipped with tools to create stronger connection in their organizations and communities.

The S Word

Wielding Sincerity in a World of Performance

How leaders and teams replace performative culture with genuine connection using Joshua's SWORD framework.

We live in a world full of polished messaging, curated identities, and performative communication. Everyone says trust matters. Everyone says connection matters. But too often, what people experience instead is distance, caution, and performance.

Sincerity changes that.

In this signature keynote based on his book The S Word, Joshua Routh shares a powerful and practical framework for building trust, strengthening relationships, and creating cultures people actually want to be part of. Through his SWORD Framework™ —Self-Awareness, Witness, Openness, Repair, and Debrief—Joshua helps audiences understand that sincerity is not weakness. It is not softness. It is a strategic advantage.

With unforgettable stories, interactive insight, and a message that is both meaningful and actionable, this keynote challenges audiences to stop performing connection and start creating it.

Perfect for:

Leaders who want to build trust without relying on corporate buzzwords
Teams struggling with disengagement, miscommunication, or disconnection
Organizations wanting healthier culture, better retention, and stronger collaboration
Conferences looking for a keynote that is original, memorable, and deeply relevant.

Audience members will leave with:

A practical framework for building trust and stronger human connection
A deeper understanding of how sincerity impacts leadership, communication, and culture
Tools for improving collaboration, repairing relationships, and increasing engagement
A fresh perspective on why human connection remains a competitive advantage

A Complaint-Free Workplace

A Complaint-Free Workplace

Turning Complainers Into Collaborators

How organizations transform complaining cultures into solution-driven teams that boost engagement and productivity.

Complaining is costly.

It drains morale, weakens culture, hurts teamwork, and keeps organizations stuck in cycles of blame instead of movement. But most complaints are not just noise. They are signals. And when we understand what is driving them, we can redirect that energy into something far more productive.

In this humorous, engaging, and highly practical keynote, Joshua Routh teaches audiences how to recognize the hidden motivations behind complaints and transform negative patterns into constructive collaboration. As one of the few speakers certified to share this Complaint Free World content, Joshua delivers a message that is both entertaining and immediately useful.

This keynote gives teams and leaders the tools to stop feeding negativity and start building accountability, gratitude, and forward motion.

Perfect for:

- Organizations wanting to improve morale and reduce negativity
- Leaders who want to turn habitual complaining into productive problem-solving
- Teams experiencing friction, blame, or low ownership
- Conferences seeking a high-energy keynote with practical takeaways

Audience members will leave with:

- An understanding of the five core motivations behind complaints through the G.R.I.P.E. framework
- Practical tools to redirect unproductive conversations into solution-focused dialogue
- Strategies for building gratitude, accountability, and collaboration
- A stronger sense of personal ownership over culture and communication

Wielding Humanity

Wielding Humanity

Staying Human, Trusted, and Connected in the Age of AI

How organizations embrace AI while protecting the trust, culture, and human connection that matter most.

AI is changing the way we work, communicate, sell, serve, and lead.

It can make us faster. It can make us more efficient. It can even make us sound smarter. But it cannot replace what people want most from leaders, teams, brands, and organizations: trust, sincerity, discernment, and real human connection.

In this engaging and thought-provoking keynote, Joshua Routh helps audiences understand how to use AI as a tool without losing the humanity that makes work meaningful and relationships strong. With humor, insight, and memorable storytelling, Joshua shows why the future will not belong to the people who simply know how to use AI. It will belong to the people who know how to use it without becoming artificial themselves.

This keynote is especially powerful for organizations navigating rapid change and wondering how to stay relevant, relational, and deeply human in a world increasingly shaped by machines.

Perfect for:

Leaders navigating AI disruption without wanting to lose culture
HR, hospitality, and people-centered organizations trying to balance efficiency with humanity
Associations and conferences exploring how AI will impact communication, trust, service, and leadership
Teams that want practical, human-centered ways to adapt to new tools

Audience members will leave with:

A clearer understanding of where AI helps and where human connection matters more than ever
Practical ways to preserve trust, sincerity, and emotional intelligence in AI-assisted workplaces
Better language for thinking about authenticity, performance, and communication in a tech-driven world
A renewed commitment to using technology to enhance relationships rather than replace them

"I am halfway through your book and I LOVE it. I have always strongly believed in 'true' sincerity - dropping everything to just listen and connect - to be a witness and then repair.

Until now, I did not have the words for this. Now I do!

Thank you!!!"

Lisa Greening,
Turn the Page
Executive Director

I have been a professional entertainer for over thirty years. I have performed at the Smithsonian, shaken hands with a sitting president, and been chased out of a hay barn by three hundred kids chanting "You suck."

That last one taught me the most.

Somewhere along the way, authenticity became a brand. A costume. A way of saying, "this is who I am" while keeping everyone at arm's length. We got so good at performing ourselves that we forgot how to connect.

Maybe you have noticed it too. Relationships running on autopilot. Conversations that stay on the surface. The weight of performing the right version of yourself for every room.

This book is about sincerity. Not as a personality trait, but as a practice. A set of skills I learned the hard way through failure, repair, and thousands of hours in front of audiences who could tell when I was faking it. And in life offstage, where the stakes are higher.

The SWORD framework (yes, I actually swallow swords, forgive the acronym) gives you five practices.

Self-Awareness: See your blind spots before they cost you. Witness: Really see others and watch everything change. Openness: Stay curious enough to be changed by others. Repair: When you cause damage, fix it. For real. Debrief: Learn from everything. Get better on purpose.

Together, they close the gap between who you say you are and who you actually show up as.

Each chapter opens with a story, then digs into the mechanics, then gives you questions to apply it to your own life. Four appendices go deeper: a guided practice path, a leadership guide, a history of sincerity across cultures, and a reading list to continue the work.

This is not a quick tips book. It is a thorough examination of what it takes to show up real and a practical guide for doing it.
